

North Carolina launched an adventure 100 years ago, responding to citizens who wanted to preserve a majestic forest. In 1916, upon North Carolina's purchase of 524 rugged acres, Mount Mitchell became one of the nation's first state parks.

Today's North Carolina state park system includes 225,000 acres, 15 million visitors and more than 500 full-time staff. Help celebrate 100 years. Sign up to receive up to three commemorative lapel pins. Wear these before selectively giving them to park visitors as an extra show of appreciation or to 'make someone's day'. All full-time permanent and full-time 11-month staff may sign up.
