Weather or not

Greg Cox of WITN-TV installs the rack for a new weather station on a telephone pole at Jockey's Ridge State Park. An electronic feed will provide the Washington, N.C., television station with a direct line to Outer Banks weather. It also will provide Jockey's Ridge State Park with the raw material for dune-migration studies and for an interactive weather display. With donations of labor and materials from Sprint, North Carolina Power and WITN, the weather station will cost Jockey's Ridge nothing. Superintendent George Barnes said he expects to hold a grand opening this summer for the new visitors center and museum.
